Download Setup + Crack

Reusing layers After you organize an image into layers, you're free to work on only the particular layers you want, or you can work on all the layers in the image. When you work on a particular layer or on a group of layers, they become known as a `_stack_` or `_group_`. You can manage your layers in several ways. The most common way to do so is to let Photoshop do the work for you, as shown in Figure 11-2. When you want to work on a specific layer, follow these steps: 1. **From the Layers palette, choose Layer** ⇒ **New Group to create a new group.** The new group is named based on the name of the image file that contains the group. The new group appears in the Layers palette. 2. **From the Layers palette, double-click the name of the group
