General workspace When you first open Photoshop, you see the workspace shown in Figure 1-1, which is a slightly modified view of what you see when you first launch Photoshop. It's similar to the window you see when you first open any program on your computer. As you create your first images in Photoshop, you'll have a file, or document, open in the workspace. The most important thing to remember about this workspace is that it's layered. That means that any image you add to the page is like a layer — it can Overcoming the barrier of body image: supportive psychotherapy for body dysmorphic disorder. We demonstrate the efficacy of a treatment for body image disturbance in body dysmorphic disorder (BDD) that draws on existing outcome studies in obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD). We briefly review the natural history of BDD and suggest that psychological factors may play a role in the onset of BDD, explaining the difficulties in successfully treating BDD when considered against the background of OCD. We then describe the functional and dysfunctional dimensions of BDD and examine key aspects of a brief treatment, called Saffren-friendly psychotherapy (SFP), that was delivered to BDD patients. SFP involved recognition of BDD-related obsessional themes, treatment of those obsessional themes, and restructuring of the patient's life. We summarise the results of a single-group pre-post treatment study. Patients showed clinically significant symptom reduction and significant improvements in body image, quality of life and life satisfaction. We suggest that SFP is a promising treatment for BDD, and encourage replication of our findings and tests of the effectiveness of SFP as a standalone intervention.

50% of the world's wealth is concentrated in the hands of just 10% of the population 70% of the world's water supply is being wasted The UK has just 1.5% of the planet's territorial water supply – and uses 50% of that 1% to produce water. For example, less than 0.5% of the UK's demand for water is used in the overall UK economy – and yet we waste 50% of our supply. Because of these shocking statistics, the rest of the world is now calling for the UK to adopt a more responsible water usage policy. Meanwhile, the UK is actually in the process of wasting more than 40% of its water supply – and there is no clarity as to when that is set to end! More water is used in the UK to water lawns and drive our cars than to satisfy our needs. Meanwhile, more than half of our water is actually used for growing food. So, how can we waste so much of our precious water supply, while at the same time being so efficient at using it? Let's first have a look at exactly where the UK's supply of water comes from... Where is our water supply coming from? In the UK, we get our supply of water from

by a range of international donors to avoid resource constraints in future periods. These grants are expected to cover the three short-term projects mentioned above: Partnership /co-operation between

Nepal and Taiwan Joint Taiwan-Nepal Training Nepal's first tourism sectoral training Three more long-term projects are also planned, listed below: Taiwan and Nepal to conduct joint research on country studies Policy and plan preparations for the next 10 years The impact of changes in tourism in Nepal on Taiwan's tourism industry The big picture of tourism development in Nepal Increasing Taiwanese investment in Nepal

3.3. Guidance and Support to Taiwan Government and Ministries This role will be at the level of "Facilitating" in the first phase of the project. A series of meetings and conferences will be organised at the level of the Nepalese MFA, MOFA and MTM ministry to reflect on and share Taiwan's experience in the field of tourism development. Amongst others, the advisory council will be meeting at least twice in Nepal.

3.4. Impact Assessment and Reporting Due to the long-term nature of the project, an impact assessment will be carried out after a pilot project is completed. The assessment will be carried out following the framework laid out in the 2013-2017 Strategic Development Plan of the Ministry of Education and Human Resources Development, Nepal.

3.5. Networking and promotion To be able to carry out a successful project, it is important that the key partners are united. In addition to the advisory council and advisory team, an Advisory Board of local NGOs with a high-level network in Nepal will be formed. Each advisory partner is committed to be the "constituent member" of the Advisory Board, in which at least 3-5 members are included. The board will meet regularly at least twice a year to identify and address issues and opportunities for the project. With the board, the Ministry of Tourism will conduct a tour of Taipei in 2017.

3.6. Recruitment and Consultation To be able to carry out a successful project, it is important to be able to draw on relevant knowledge and experience from a large number of stakeholders at national and regional levels. To consult these stakeholders, a Consultative meeting will be held at least twice a year, including seminars and workshops.
